Child Find

By Wendy Overturf

This is the time of year when many school districts are promoting registration for pre-school and kindergarten programs. As part of this process, districts may also be doing "screening" to identify children who may have a disability. This is part of their Child Find requirement.

Child Find is a part of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) that requires states to have a system to locate, identify, and refer as early as possible all children with disabilities, aged birth to 21, for early intervention or special education services. Infants and toddlers with disabilities (birth-2 years of age) and their families receive early intervention services under IDEA Part C. Children and youth (ages 3-21) receive special education and related services under IDEA Part B.

Child Find seeks to identify all children with disabilities from birth through age 21. This includes children who are being homeschooled or who are in private schools. While districts may have set aside "screening" times for preschool children, parents can request a special education referral at any time during the year if they suspect that their child may have a disability. If parents of children between the ages of 3-21 have questions on how to go about this process, one of the best methods is to contact the Director of Special Education in their school district. In Wisconsin, parents of children under the age of three can find local contact information through the Wisconsin Department of Health Services (DHS) or by calling 608-266-1865. The DHS website also has information about the referral process and eligibility criteria for Birth to 3 programs as well as other resources related to typical child development.

At times, referrals for Special Education are made by service providers such as teachers, doctors, nurses, school workers, child care workers or anyone who may be concerned about a child's development. These referrals do not require parental consent. However, the person making the referral needs to let the parent know that the referral has been made. Before a child can be evaluated, parent(s) do need to provide informed written consent. More detailed information about the special education process for children 3-21 can be found in Special Education in Plain Language. IEP Part 1 is a webinar presented by WI FACETS that also has information about the referral and evaluation process. It can be requested at the archived webinar section of their website.

Family Engagement within School-wide Positive Behavioral Interventions and Supports

Garbacz, S. Andrew, et al. Preventing School Failure: Alternative Education for Children and Youth 60.1 (2016): 60-69.

Article Link

Abstract: Parent educational involvement is an important avenue for enhancing student outcomes. Schools seek myriad ways to include families; however, the parent involvement practices used by schools lack coordination and are disconnected from existing school approaches. School-wide Positive Behavioral Interventions and Supports (PBIS) is a systematic and coordinated framework used in more than 19,000 schools to support student behavior. Despite its success, PBIS implementation underemphasizes comprehensive systems for engaging families. The purpose of this article is to present a framework of family engagement within PBIS. The purpose of coordinating and sequencing family engagement within PBIS is to increase the efficiency, effectiveness, relevance, and durability of PBIS by supporting students across settings. Furthermore, this model extends current parent involvement frameworks by coordinating systematic family engagement in education

Integrating Mathematical Thinking Into Family Engagement Programs

Abstract: Exposing young children to early math concepts is important in the development of their math skills, in their confidence in these skills, and in their ability to use math later in life.1-2 Early exposure to math also supports the development of children's reasoning and problem-solving skills, both of which contribute to success in and out of school.3 In addition, a child's early math skills are an indicator of later success in both math and reading.4-7 Unfortunately, children who begin kindergarten with weak math skills are likely to remain behind in the later grades.5,8-9 And the students who are the least prepared in math when they begin school tend to be from minority and low-income families.10-11

Response to Intervention with Preschool Aged Children

Response to Intervention (RTI) refers to a process of providing supports to children who are at-risk for learning disabilities to:

- Identify learning difficulties earlier and more reliably
- Decrease the number of inappropriate referrals to special education
- Decrease the disproportionate representation of minority children in special education

It had been brought to the attention of the Office of Special Education Programs (OSEP) that some school districts may be using RTI strategies to delay or deny a timely initial evaluation for preschool children suspected of having a disability.

On April 29, 2016, the U.S. Department of Education released a memorandum stating that "A Response to Intervention Process Cannot Be Used to Delay-Deny an Evaluation for Preschool Special Education Services under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA)." The memorandum further states, "States and LEAs (typically school districts) have an obligation to ensure that evaluations of all children suspected of having a disability, including evaluation of 3-, 4-, or 5 year -old children enrolled in preschool programs, are not delayed or denied because of implementation of an RTI strategy." In other words, once a school district receives a referral from a preschool program, the district must start the process to evaluate whether the child has a disability under IDEA. The school district may not hold off on the evaluation in order to complete the RTI process. Additional information on Early Childhood and the WI RtI framework.

Get Ready to Read

It is critical to help young children be ready for school by working with them to develop early literacy and learning skills. Because strong reading skills form the basis for learning in all subjects, it is important to identify those who struggle with reading as early as possible. Children who have been read to at home come to school with important early literacy skills. This site has an abundance of information related to early literacy. The site also has videos and webinars of examples of how parents can promote these important early literacy skills. Getting Ready to Read website

Quality early care and education is fundamental to creating a better world. WECA works to advance positive change for children by focusing on the professionals who provide child care for well over 70% of Wisconsin's children. WECA strengthens the capacities of child care professionals through:

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT for child care providers. New discoveries on brain development and social-emotional learning call for new approaches. Through workshops, an annual conference, a statewide member network, and more, WECA helps providers advance their skills.

ADVOCACY for policies and programs that support the well-being of children and the early childhood education workforce.

COMMUNICATIONS that convey what early childhood professionals do and how valuable their contributions are to families, businesses, our communities, and the world.

RESEARCH on the child care workforce that identifies strengths, needs, and strategies for improvement.

Part of WECA's mission and vision is: "With high-quality care children do better in school and in life, becoming adults with social and emotional skills that enable them to work, play, and relate well to others. With high-quality care, working parents can feel more confident and productive on the job, knowing that their children are safe and thriving."

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE NEWSLETTER

Upcoming newsletter topics:

April: Autism Spectrum Disorder May: Mental Health June: ADD/ADHD

We would love to hear your family engagement news, strategies & stories!

To submit contributions, you may use either the attached Word document for contributing articles, events, or resources. Send submissions to woverturf@wifacets.org. If unable to access the form, you may send information in an email.

Deadline for submitting contributions to each month's issue is by the 1st of each month. For time sensitive training advertisements, the information should be sent a minimum of two weeks prior to the event date; ideally a month ahead of time. Material appropriate for the monthly newsletter include web links to sources of family involvement/parent leadership resources, advertisements for statewide trainings for parents, youth or parent/educator audiences, information about statewide parent agencies, recent research pertaining to family engagement, and family engagement success articles. Family engagement success or impact stories can be written at an individual or family level, classroom level, school building level, district level, county level, CESA level, etc. Your submittal may not be in the final copy of the upcoming month's newsletter if it was in a previous month's email, the event date has passed, the web link doesn't work, or there is already an article in place. Articles and resources will be saved to be used for later newsletters. We reserve the right to edit contributions as needed.

This monthly update is provided by the Wisconsin Family Assistance Center for Education, Training & Support (WI FACETS) to share statewide information regarding parent leadership and family involvement.
